PART C: READING (5 PTS)

I. Read the reading passage and choose the best answer to each of the following questions (2 pts)

Thinking about the environmental impact of our lifestyles and life choices is getting to be second nature for many of us. Everywhere we turn – in the classroom, in the media, on billboards and posters, even tucked in with our utility bills – there are reminders to turn off the lights, leave our cars at home, fix the drips in our faucets and seal the air leaks in our windows and doors. There isn't much of a chance that we'll forget about what our living here on Earth means to the planet and its future.

Yet many people, especially young people, are living their lives with a low environmental impact without even knowing it, much less actually planning to do. Take music, for example. A few years ago, young people were buying millions of CDs, unthinkingly creating industrial pollution and tons of plastic waste in the process. Now a large proportion of music is downloaded digitally from computers, meaning that there are far fewer plastic discs being produced – not to mention those flimsy plastic cases that break the second time you open them. It'sinstant environmentalism – and convergence, too! It's even possible to recycle your MP3 when it stops working, so the whole shift to digital music is an environmental boon.

Transportation is another area where young people have a positive impact – again, not entirely by choice. Cars are expensive to buy and increasingly expensive to run, and as a result most young people can't afford to drive. Inadvertently, they are forced to do all the things the environmentalists are insisting they should do anyway: walk, use public transportation, zip around on bicycles and motorbikes with very low fuel consumption – and in the best cases – low carbon emissions as well. If only we could get most of the population to stick to these forms of transportation, global warming would be much less of an issue than it is now.

Housing is another area where lack of money has very positive environmental effects. Several students who share a small apartment are doing a lot more than they know to save resources and make the world a greener place. They use a lot less energy for heat and light, save on raw materials by living in order accommodation, and even help to protect the environment by using fewer chemicals to clean the place – if they bother to clean it at all.

Speaking of cleaning – young people who like to wear the same clothes day after day are doing the environment a favour as well. Washing machines use up huge amounts of energy and water, and the fewer clothes we wash, the better off the environment will be. So maybe you can add that to your arsenal of arguments as you grab that favourite sweatshirt out of the laundry room. "I'm doing my part to reduce waste and global warming!" sounds a lot more persuasive than "Don't wash it now, Mom! I need to wear it tonight"

51. According to the writer, most people……
A. are constantly being reminded of environmental issues
B. don't know much about environmental issues
C. aren't interested in environmental issues
D. are trying to improve the environment

52. Many young people……..
A. purposely try to reduce their environmental impact
B. have very wasteful lifestyles
C. are unaware of the positive consequences of their lifestyles
D. talk a lot about the environment

53. According to the writer, the advantage of digital music players is that……
A. they are cheap
B. they produce better sound
C. they are easy to carry
D. their use produces less waste

54. The writer suggests that young people…….
A. would own cars if they could
B. prefer to drive smaller cars
C. aren't very good drivers
D. make a conscious decision not to own cars

55. What main factor makes it unlikely that young people will own a car?
A. Environmental concerns
B. Expense
C. Lack of interest
D. Disapproval of peers

56. Why does the writer see student accommodation as a positive environmental factor?
A. It is cheap to build
B. The rents are low
C. More people live in less space
D. It is easy to clean

57. The word "They" in the 4th paragraph refers to……..
A. environmental impacts
B. houses
C. students in shared housing
D. resources

58. What does the writer suggest about students' cleaning habit?
A. It uses a lot of energy
B. Young people don't like doing it
C. They share cleaning duties
D. They clean regularly

59. What is true about washing clothes?
A. It uses a lot of energy
B. Young people don't like doing it
C. Young people do it too much
D. It uses little energy

60. The word "reduce" in the last paragraph is closest in meaning to.....

A. increase B. contaminate C. escalate D. lower

Your answers:

51.	52.	53.	54.	55.
56.	57.	58.	59.	60.

II. Read the following passage and circle the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct word for each of the blank. (2 pts)

INFLUENCES OF TELEVISION

Television has changed the lifestyle of people in every industrialized country in the world. In the United States, where sociologists have studied the effects, some interesting observations have been made.

Television, although not essential, has become a(n) (61).....part of most people's lives. It has become a baby – sitter, an initiator of conversations, the major transmitter of culture, a keeper of traditions. Yet when what can be seen on TV in one day is critically analyzed, it becomes evident that television is not a teacher but a sustainer. The poor (62).....of programming does not elevate people into greater (63)....., but rather maintains and encourages the status quo.

The (64).....reason of the lack of quality in American television is related to both the history of TV programming development and the economies of TV. Television in America began with radio. Radio companies and their sponsors first (65).....with television. Therefore, the close relationship, which the advertisers had with radio programs became the system for many actually produced programs. Thus (66).....from the capitalistic, profit – oriented sector of American society, television is primarily (67).....with reflecting and attracting society rather than (68).....and experimenting with new ideas. Advertisers want to attract the largest viewing audience possible; to do so requires that the programs be entertaining rather than challenging.

Television in America today remains, to a large (69)....., with the same organization and standards as it had thirty years ago. The hope for some evolution and true achievement toward improving society will require a change in (70).....system.

LOOKING AFTER THE COUNTRYSIDE – THE NATIONAL TRUST

The National Trust is an organization whose aim is to conserve the British countryside. Gill Page visits the Lleyn Peninsula in North Wales and talks to one of the wardens employed by the Trust to look after the beautiful areas it owns.

(71).....

Common sense. That's what a National Trust Warden needs, according to Gareth Roberts. "And you definitely need to good at handling people, because you're continually dealing with farmers, visitors, conservationists and building firms."

(72) .....

Gareth was born and bred on the Lleyn Peninsula and worked on his parents' farm until he married. About 80 people applied for the post as National Trust Warden for the Lleyn Peninsula. In the end, Gareth's local knowledge and farming experience won him the job, despite his lack of formal training.

(73) .....

"I find it particularly helpful that I still farm with my parents and that I can deal with farmers on the same level and be aware of their problems. Also, they can't take me in about anything!" he says. His farming life also means he is well able to cope with the physical demands of the job - erecting fences, planting trees, building walls.

(74) .....

Gareth says that, when he started his job, farmers and conservationists were set against each other. Both sides wanted things done their way. Now they are talking and see each other's point of view. "We're at the crossroads and there's just a small step needed to join them together" says Gareth.

(75) .....

Conservation is one of the main aspects of Gareth's work, along with public entry to the Trust's land, tree planting and maintenance, and meeting the Trust's tenant farmers. "My role is to make sure jobs get finished, with as little fuss and as economically as possible. What I enjoy most is seeing projects completed, although about half my time is spent on reports, signing bills and so on."

A. What makes him good at the job
B. Towards agreement
